Q: Collaboration issues while implementing QuickBlox Chat API I am currently using QB Chat API in my application and i have a feature which i need to implement. Basically, there is a list of post in which you can comment on them and you can view all the comments in this post. The primary challenge is that when i load this response of comments, i also need to call this API again and get another list of comments from that post. In short, i need to call the QB API for each comment in this post. On top of that, I have to show a loading indicator for each post. I am using QB async requests and so in each post, i am returning async requests. My problem is that QB request does not return async request. It returns an object called QBResponse which has some data, and further down in the response there is a QBAsyncResult object which i am using to get a list of comments in post response. When i call QBAsyncFetchAllComments for one post, it does not return any results. I have implemented all the logic of showing and hiding loading indicator and i am basically at a point where i need to call QB API for each post response. Here is a snippet of my code: -

```
(void)show_requesting_indicator { self.loading_view.alpha = 0.5;
