Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a data transmission and reception circuit adapted to be incorporated in a semiconductor integrated circuit used, for example, for the transmission of digital data signals, and particularly to a circuit with a waveform shaping function. 2. Description of the Related Art In a semiconductor integrated circuit, circuits are provided to deal with analog signals and digital signals. A distinction is made between "analog" circuits provided to cope with analog signals, and "digital" circuits provided to cope with digital signals. The processing of data in analog circuits is carried out in waveform, and the conversion or the like of data from analog to digital form for the digital circuits is carried out by a digital signal (which is binary data of a predetermined logic level). It is known that the processing of digital signals is more susceptible to noise due to the characteristics of an electronic circuit. When data is transmitted by a digital signal, it is therefore necessary to provide transmission equipment with a function of improving the C/N (Carrier-to-noise ratio) characteristics. When data is transmitted by an analog signal, it is not necessary to provide the transmission equipment with a special function of improving the C/N characteristics. One method of transmitting data by an analog signal is to provide a data transmitting circuit with the

The objectives of this study were to determine the immunologic and pharmacokinetic responses of intramuscular (IM) and subcutaneous (SC) vaccines in pigs. Forty pigs (barrows or gilts) were randomly assigned to 5 groups of 8 pigs each. Pigs in group 1 were vaccinated IM with the Bartha-K61 vaccine at 5 ml/pig and were also exposed to simulated infection with 10(2) 4/91 virulent Escherichia coli (EC) O139. Pigs in groups 2, 3, and 4 were vaccinated SC with the 7A vaccine, and groups 2 and 3 were also exposed to infection with 10(2) EC O139. Pigs in group 5 were control animals (immunized with diluent) exposed to 10(2) EC O139 but without immunization. Blood samples were collected at the times indicated, and serum bactericidal antibody (SBA) titers were determined against the challenge strain. The data were analyzed with an analysis of variance test for linear, polynomial, and exponential growth curves, with an effect of immunization. Serum bactericidal antibodies were not detected in control animals, but group 1 pigs were protected. Serum bactericidal antibody titers were most likely in the geometric pattern of a three-phase response, with the mean titers highest in phase 1 (t = 1-4 d) and lowest in phase 3 (t > or = 13 d). In phase 1, IM vaccination at 1 mL/pig (group 1) had the highest bactericidal antibody titers in the IM group, but this may not have reached statistical significance at the alpha level of 5%. In phase 2, SC vaccination at 7.5 ml/pig (group 2) had the highest bactericidal antibody titers in the SC group.(ABSTRACT TRUNCATED AT 250 WORDS)Detection of HSV-2 antibodies in urine with an enzyme-linked immunosorbent assay.
