monuments. Some of these people have made good points, while others are just self-interested political opportunists. Let's look at the history of the Confederate War Memorial and the efforts to remove it. The idea behind the Confederate monument was to honor those killed in the war, which had supposedly been fought to preserve states' rights and to keep people free from the oppression of the federal government. But of course that's nonsense. The Union army invaded Confederate states because it wanted the slaves. It forced the surrender of the Confederate army on the battlefields because it was winning. It was supported and funded by the federal government because it was a military conflict between two nations and in the national interest.

The war was waged because the federal government wants to take over states and supplant any state government that won't submit to its wishes. However, more important, the people who have staked their lives, fortunes e79caf774b

This invention relates generally to internal combustion engines and more particularly to an internal combustion engine which is adapted to be charged with combustion air prior to or while running the engine. 2. Description of the Prior Art

It is known in the art to provide internal combustion engines such as a two-cycle engine with an air-intake and combustion chamber structure which is oriented relative to a crankcase opening to an exhaust port. Examples of such an arrangement are found in U.S. Pat. Nos. 4,722,351 and 4,856,650 issued to Bottum et al. In order to enable a two-cycle engine to develop a high torque output, it is necessary that the combustion chamber structure be close to the crankcase opening. In a two-cycle engine of this type, the crankcase opening is less than about one-half the bore diameter of the combustion chamber opening, and accordingly, the air-intake and combustion chamber openings are arranged in a cruciform orientation relative to the crankcase. In prior art internal combustion engines of this type, charge air entering the air-intake opening is mixed with the exhaust gases. That is, exhaust gases exit the engine via the exhaust port in the engine head and are conducted through the air-intake opening into the engine crankcase. Typically, the air entering the air-intake opening is heated by the exhaust gases, thereby resulting in a rise in engine oil temperature. When the engine oil temperature exceeds an acceptable temperature, the engine may not run properly, or, alternatively, components such as bearings in the engine may be subjected to excessive stress. In order to avoid the above-mentioned problem, it is a known practice to discharge exhaust gases from the air-intake opening prior to charging them with fresh air entering the air-intake opening. In a two-cycle engine, the exhaust discharge is arranged in a direction from the air-intake opening towards the exhaust port to thereby maintain the air-intake opening at a higher temperature than the exhaust port. An alternative to the above arrangement is disclosed in Japanese Laid-Open Patent Application No. 63-56951. In this arrangement, a casing is disposed between the
