Game Modes: Survival Single Match Team Match Dead Zone Team Match (Death match) Team Death match Weapon-Rating (Only for Team Death match) Game statistics Weapons-Rating Team Death match is a game mode where all the team deaths are part of one match. It's similar to point ratio game. Everyone dies when a point is reached in the maximum time, this point is not necessarily only one. Once all the players have died, the team with most points wins. In the weapon rating you can choose to which weapon this team has to use for the match. This can be pistols, shotguns or machetes. If all players have died during the match, everyone is the winner. Dead Zone is a game mode where players start in a range of around 15km from the center. This distance determines where players have to kill for a win. There are a lot of things players can use to defend themselves. They can try to make bulletproof cover with trees, plants and boulders, get into the range where they can't be shot, escape or the last resort: the zombify. The other team has to zombify the player who has the closest position to the center of the map. It will trigger once the character dies, but the player won't be able to be killed. Equipment The equipment is random. The map is divided into areas, where players are going to encounter. Herbs and Plants: The first 5 places will be occupied by a herb that the player can gather to survive and there will be two things that can grow: a shrub that gives 1st place and two herb that the player can gather to survive. A player can also gather stalks and shrubs to craft a spear, pike, sickle and axes to craft. But players will be able to get a different weapon. For example, if the player has a knife, he can use it for different enemies. But this can also be shot, so players have to be careful. Camps: As the name says, camps can give 2 types of armor for a player, so in case of a player that has no shelter, he will have a chance to survive by the armor. The camps are divided by each of the two weapons that players have to choose. The camp will be hidden and there will be less of the camp than the player has weapon, so if the player has no weapons he will have to choose armor type in the camp. In the

The food court at the European Games is the topic of many rumours, mostly because there is little evidence of the European Ministry of Plenty being able to supply it. However today, after the Spanish PM somehow negotiated a deal worth billions with Renault, Spanish newspaper El Pais (pay wall) ran a small article debunking all the food court rumours on the basis of facts. A bit like an airport with no planes landing outside Terminal 5, it seems no one's going to be buying flights on the Eurostar this time. The sources for the article are taken directly from one of the meetings to discuss the food court, with no additional verification, of course, apart from the outlandish quantity of red velvet cake used to illustrate that there was absolutely no need to use them. However if you believe the thing is going to be infested by junk-eating giant ants, then it is worth bearing in mind that our own source said: Cinebarre believes it will be a less colorful than Wembley but says that the two will stand "side by side", adding: The match will not be played in the Spanish capital but the gym facilities and the stands will be shared with the people of Madrid. The point is that if the stadium is half-empty, including half-empty stands, then it is a significant market failure. In the end it is always the consumers, not the sellers, who have to foot the bill. So how much of the £250 million
