Do you guys know how to copy and paste text from different lines together? For example `if(option == "1") { if(option == "") { textBox1.Text = "You didn't choose any option."; //blah blah blah } else { textBox1.Text = "Please enter a value."; //blah blah blah } } else if(option == "2") { if(option == "") { //blah blah blah } else { textBox1.Text = "Please enter a value."; //blah blah blah } }` And be able to paste both of the conditions together. What's the keyword for this in Visual Studio 2010? A: It's probably Paste Special - then Select

The $200 watch will be available starting in September and has an onboard heart monitor. You can only buy the watch in the US, and it will cost you $249.99 after a $50 discount on Fitbit's website. Fitbit Force starts shipping Fitbit also announced the Fitbit Force, a new fitness tracker that uses electrical impulses to record your step count and track your sleep, among other things. The Fitbit Force is available today, starting at $199.99. Both the Force and the new watch will be available in all of Fitbit's markets, but they'll be made by third-party partners. The Force is also the first fitness tracker with sleep tracking from an outside company. It can detect stages of sleep, and also alert you when you have fallen asleep and wake you up when you've been asleep for a certain period of time. Fitbit says that sleep tracking is the most important new feature of the Force, with up to 30 percent of Fitbit's customers reporting problems with sleep tracking in previous watches. "The vast majority of us don't need to wear a watch to track our sleep. At Fitbit, we believe the best fitness trackers are so smart they help to make us healthy
