My Experience My Experience My experience with Ashland Bank was that of a perfect storm of unwanted issues that rocked my world. The bank was following up on an error in a credit card transaction, which was later refunded; however, the bank kept calling me repeatedly for years! A customer service representative explained that the number I had been given for my account was a local number and there was a "box drop" error on my account. This was not true. The agent said I would have to have internet banking and internet access to my account in order to clear this error, which meant internet access was a problem for me. My internet service was, at the time, a HughesNet satellite Internet service. I asked for a refund for my services, which was given. Finally, I asked the agent to stop calling me. Over a year later, the bank contacted me to tell me that it had closed my account. This was later confirmed by the executive vice president of my branch. The debt has been resolved, but the bank has been calling me repeatedly, over and over again, for the past 3 years. I asked the person in charge of the consumer department to stop calling me. However, the bank has called my home more than 30 times in the past few months, even though I have asked the bank to stop calling me. Comments (3) Notify me by e-mail when others post comments

[Role of the bacterial adhesins in colonization and pathogenesis of Haemophilus ducreyi]. A recent study has demonstrated that the lipooligosaccharide of Haemophilus ducreyi induces bacterial adhesion to HeLa and CHO-transfected cell lines. In this study we have identified the Bp antigens responsible for the H. ducreyi adhesion to these cellular lines. The complete list of the Bp serotypes included in this study consists in the Fp2, Fp6, Fp8 and Fp9 antigens. Serotype Fp2 is a new antigen; the other antigens are new combinations of previously described antigens. The fact that these antigens are different to those of the lipooligosaccharide (LOS) does not imply a different function in H. ducreyi. These antigens could be involved in the binding of the bacteria to the cell lines because they can interact with the carbohydrate receptors present on cell lines. The specificities of the three cell lines tested were serotype dependent. The Fp antigens of H. ducreyi were not involved in the induction of the activation of C3b complement binding protein and of the MASP complex of the alternative pathway as previously shown for the LOS. However, adhesion of H. ducreyi was inhibited by these MASP complex components at certain concentrations.By default, on the Multimarkdown website, if you want to convert HTML to Markdown, the toolbar will look like this, at the top left of the page (the source link is visible above): If you want to convert to Markdown instead, the toolbar will look like this, at the top left of the page (the source link is visible above): This is because on the Multimarkdown website, you can still use the "Edit HTML" link to edit the HTML code, and it does not automatically convert it to Markdown.Q: Split string in "." by Python regex I have string like below: text = 'Testfile.txt.dyn-module.system' And I want string like below: [Testfile.txt, dyn-module.system] My code: import re text = 'Testfile.txt.dyn-module.system' splitted =
