EXECUTIVE: More than half of Jihadis are from West, say army counter-terrorism officials More than half of the militants of the West-based international terrorist group Islamic State are citizens of Western countries, including Britain and France, a top counter-terrorism official has warned.
The Pentagon says it has been hit with an IS plot to attack New York City landmarks and the London Olympics, and the British Army says that within a year it will be capable of mounting a full-scale military offensive in Iraq. All of which has led security officials to warn that Islamic State will remain a threat for some time to come. Central Command chief Gen Lloyd Austin, who is in charge of all US military operations in the Middle East, says the group has attracted militants from all over the globe, with the vast majority being from western countries. The US, which is leading a coalition against Islamic State, says there are now more than 30,000 foreign fighters from 75 nations who are taking part in fighting for the group. "ISIL is taking advantage of the internet to attract individuals and to persuade them that what they are doing is not only acceptable but laudable, particularly amongst young men," Gen Austin told reporters in a briefing on Wednesday. "The majority of the fighters who we see are from western countries. "They are from the UK, from France, from Belgium, from the Netherlands, from Germany, from the US. "The vast majority of these individuals are not from Syria." As a result, according to one of the commanders of the Syrian Democratic Forces, a Kurdish-led coalition fighting IS, the group is spread throughout Turkey and Syria. "ISIL has a presence in the Istanbul-Baghdad highway and is fighting in rural Aleppo," Col Mohammed Hussein Siala told AFP. Several militant leaders have called on Muslims in western countries to travel to Syria to fight for IS, saying they will obtain religious burial rights. Britain's senior counter-terrorism officer Mark Rowley warned that IS is not finished yet in its bid to dominate Sunni Muslim communities in Iraq and Syria. He said British citizens have been involved in IS activities in the UK and a convicted terrorist has even been sent back there by the authorities, after
