With this new update, you can highlight the text and work on a document without having to open the document in Acrobat. Acquisition of rather Google Photos, the photo-processing service will make fat copyright pictures for you. By the way, it also works within Photoshop. When you give it a photo to become a landscape image, it can easily make the one you want. You can also do that with a beautiful image created with the Caps Lock button. It's now very simple to create a new window, and right click on a photo to input it. Moreover, Applying a template to the photo can make it in a few seconds. Lastly, if you want to crop an image, you can just press the "c" key or click on the "c" button. It is nice to edit the photos in Adobe. It's hard to imagine an image editing program that doesn't have a variety of filters. While many prefer to use Photoshop in its entirety, filters can quickly solve most of the picture needs. Basic filters tend to be built in to the software downloads. Just tried 5.2 Final and first impression is that it's awesome! It's faster and smoother than CS5.2 and so far I'm really happy. I have had some problems with the Smart previews (no text editors) when working on multiple files though. Looks like the project manager is more limited then what I used to do with CS5.2.
